Maybe there is a life after death? And maybe its not just our lives continuing, our past chronicles, and the souls that circled us from other life times, will find its way to be our companionship again, in the this life and maybe in the next life time too. This novel is based on a real story- Is it a coincidence or a real phenomena of reincarnation? Youll be the judge. 1989, when a sassy writer, Tseng Li Wha, in her thirties, constantly gets silent phone calls in the deepest of the nights, she hears the voice of the phantom, sighs from the other end of the phone, waking her up, night after night. In the beginning shes appalled, then shes annoyed by it. She finally gets her bravery together and asks him its quite late, mister, what do you want? Surprisingly, the phantom speaks up and calls her by the old name, which no one in the city of Taipei would have known, he has a strong accent from Northern China. Seventeen years ago, Li Wha, without telling her parents, she left China during the Great Cultural Revolution, and because of the political conflicts between Taiwan and China, she has never seen her parents over the course of seventeen years. Shes now 34 years old, and a successful writer. Lee Hun Min is a sophisticated gentleman that no one would suspect of doing such a thing, is the one who is calling Li Wha at the quietest time of the night. He told her he just came back from Kunming of China and has met with her parents in a coincidental event, so naturally her parents asked him to bring her some old souvenirs of hers- her pictures from childhood, a few color faded pictures of her parents and her brothers and sisters, and her old violin. Her emotion is at the mawkish point, then he shows her a picture of a young girl, about the age of seventeen- oh, thats me! Li Wha says it delightfully, then she looks at it again, she realizes that its not her! The girl in the picture looks melancholy and fragile, unlike Li Wha, who is full of vitality and energetic, but otherwise they look exactly the same. Suddenly, she begins to have memento recollections of the past - she was a high school girl in a uniform, she was on a podium of her school, other students were screaming and accusing her as the anti-communists right-wing, a bourgeois, as they throwing rocks and garbage at her. She sees herself working in the cemetery, endless human bones were everywhere. Vaguely, she sees a benign but homely old lady sheltering her in an old tumbling building, who calls her madam which is a title Li Wah cant bear- a bourgeois, a title puts her in a such predicament. She remembers she was that languished girl in the picture and played a violin perfectly, the way she could never have done; she hears her own voice speaking with a strong Northern China accent where she never had been. She sees the youthful Lee Hun Min quietly standing in a corner of a beautiful, well lit Victorian style house, the guests were sophisticated and important, but she could care less. She was the center of the event- oh, it was my seventeenth birthday, 1955, in Harbin, China...
